to you who care —

this year of our lives;

an inadequate token, but the greatest within our power to give.

CONTENTS

A year at college becomes a great pyramid. The analogy is carried over in the book, shaping scattered personalities, occasions, and fleeting moments into a crude but discernible form.

The structure assumes proportions. From the raw clay of the students and the days they have spent here is moulded the BASE.

From the foundation it rises in gradual PROGRESSION; to culminate in the APEX.

Seniors . . . about to be shaken forcefully out of the security you have known for four years like bits of lint from a rug. You clung tenaciously. Now you are to be set adrift.

What do you think in those rare moments of solitude and sanctuary, alone at night on the solarium, suddenly detached from the swarm around you in the Hub, or suspended in the half-reality that precedes sleep? Frightened? . . . or reassured?

You have belonged here. You remain only in what you must leave. You have come and lived here. Now go, and know that we have loved you.

CLASS OF '55

Juniors . . . you have life by the heels. Everything worth remembering you have all shared. You have friends, and more, you know them, what they expect; you trust them and they you.

Nothing holds any mystery any more — the library, the lab, the chapel — nothing scares you. You have been through all that; no more time for wonder and awe. You wandered alone through the mazes below until you found your own stairway up. You have earned the satisfaction you feel. Dreams have exploded in your face, and you realize at last what can be done and what will not change.

And next year is yours — opportunity and responsibility. But, under it an assurance. You have dined on the very heart, and you will carry the taste with you forever.

*Who can say how it feels to be a sophomore?
To feel the sun on your back as you walk and look around you and love everything you see.
For the first time all this is really yours.*

You are introduced into the rites of the upper-class cult. You languish in bed all morning and cut outrageously. Senior corner becomes your home. A senior is your inspiration, confidant, confessor, and best friend. Your heart pounds when you rush, quakes as you wait, warms to the melting point when you pledge.

You sophomores are wild ones; and everyone smiles tolerantly because you are sophomores and will straighten out. Inside information and intrigue become your business. But this too will pass.

And most of all you are a college girl; you dress, act, speak, think the part. You love it because you are leaving — or love it more because you are coming back.

This little tale . . .

Freshmen . . . and a new birth. High school conquests lose their savour, and you are due for a new identity.

You are forcefully impressed with sophomores. You worship the Committee and tremble against your will. You learn to play bridge and are possessed. You study not at all, then incessantly, then not at all again. English themes haunt you, and verb conjugations, passive voice.

You sing "You Can Always Tell A Freshman" and gain weight. You run with your gang all day, out to the Hub at 9:30, and cry yourself asleep at night longing for home.

And you emerge like the rest of us with varying degrees of success, and memories you will keep forever. A great year, your freshman year; but who would live it over?

epilogue

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change!
Thy pyramids built up with newer might,
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
They are but dressings of a former sight.
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
What thou dost foist upon us that is old,
And rather make them born to out desire
Than think that we before have heard them told.
Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present nor the past;
For thy records and what we see doth lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste.
This I do vow, and this shall ever be:
I will be true despite thy scythe and thee.
